

Validation of Previous Work

Approved by the Graduate Council October 12, 2005

Dr. Snyder brought two draft versions of the Validation of Previous Work policy before the council for consideration. After a brief discussion, the council approved the policy stating:

“Students requesting to use graduate coursework completed more than six years from the time of the student’s last semester before graduating must submit the coursework for review to their academic department. Departments may choose to accept the course; require validation of the course by interview, test, or other means of evaluation; require the student to re-enroll and repeat the course; or deny the course.”
